WATERS OF SCIOTO GO INTO LOWLAND

Waters of the Scioto river were creeping into the lowlands Saturday as rain and snow continued to fall in the Circleville area.

River stage Saturday stood at 11.7 feet, 2.3 feet below flood stage and the highest it had been for many months. Ervin Leist, weather observer, said that the sharp rise in the river probably was due to melted snows and ice in the northern part of the state, since no marked rise was noted in the smaller streams throughout the county.

Water fills the river basin to near the rim, Mr. Leist said, and

Public School Employees To Register All Who Seek Supplies

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7—Government printing presses today roared into a 24 hour schedule to turn out the nation's first food rationing books which will limit every man, woman and child in America approximately to three-quarters of a pound of sugar a week.

As soon as the enormous job of printing rationing books for 130,000,000 persons is completed, every consumer will be registered by public school teachers in order to qualify for a book. Each book will contain 28 stamps, all numbered, and they may be used only

15 KNOWN DEAD AS GALES LASH SOUTHERN AREA

ATLANTA, Ga., Feb. 7—A death toll of at least 15 persons today was feared likely to prove heavier as relief agencies supplied food and shelter to hundreds of southland families in the wake of tornado winds.

The winds, which in some cases reached 100-mile-an-hour intensity, levelled buildings and uprooted trees over a patchwork area including parts of Georgia, Arkansas, Alabama and Mississippi. Tennessee also had high winds, but reported no deaths.

Georgia paid the heaviest toll of lives to the fierce gales which spent their fury in the state. Five deaths were reported in the farming community of Alavton, Ga., and three children and a teacher were killed in a Negro school near Monticello, Ga. Alavton was reported isolated.

Other deaths included three in Arkansas, two in Alabama, and one in Mississippi. Property damage was estimated in the hundreds of thousands of dollars, while the number of injured remained undetermined.

The windstorms began Thursday night and continued their crazy-quilt progress through yesterday. Powerful winds, but less than tornado force, swept through Atlanta late yesterday.

Coordination Of Effort To Beat Axis To Be Directed In U. S.

By LEO V. DOLAN
INS War Editor

While long-range Japanese guns hurled shells into the city of Singapore the United States and Britain today launched the gigantic task of coordinating the anti-axis blows of the united nations on far-flung fronts throughout the world.

This great job was undertaken in Washington by a supreme war council of American and British military and naval strategists.

Establishment of the Anglo-American "combined chiefs of staffs" group with headquarters in Washington was announced by the war department.

The Japanese siege of Singapore tightened as Jap heavy guns mounted on the southern tip of the Malay peninsula hurled shells into the outskirts and residential districts of Singapore city.

British guns sent back a thunderous reply, pounding Jap targets on the mainland.

A Vichy radio broadcast picked up in London claimed the British have poured oil over the Strait of Johore north of Singapore island and will set it on fire if the Japanese attempt an invasion.

From Batavia came predictions that the Japanese may soon attempt to invade Java, center of the rich Netherlands East Indies. This dispatch said the Japanese are edging closer to Java from three directions, after striking twice at the great Dutch naval base of Surabaya by air.

Moscow reported continuing Soviet advances, especially outside Leningrad, where 53 German strong points were said to have been knocked out. The Soviets also were declared to have completed encirclement of Rzhev, northwest of Moscow, and to be pushing steadily forward against Smolensk, west of the Russian capital.

In Libya, it appeared that the axis advance toward Tobruk had been checked.

British planes last night, meanwhile, pounded the Nazi naval base at Brest on the French coast.

Even Wife Victimized By Chicago's Master Fraud

CHICAGO, Feb. 7—Worldly, distinguished-appearing J. Dewey Abraham today was pronounced the all-time champion of society swindlers as more detail accumulated around the story, first revealed Thursday, of how he bilked his relatives and friends of $500,000.

It appeared that the 57-year-old Abraham had fooled even his own wife, who testified that she thought him a "financial wizard" and a man of great affairs. He also got $20,000 to "invest" from his daughter; in fact, most of his clients were relatives or close friends.

But the prize incident of all was told by Max Jesselson, retired Chicago theatre owner, who admitted ruefully that Abraham had convinced him that several bars of gilt-covered scrap iron were gold bars and ample security for a $140,000 investment.

Apparently Abraham put that one over with some extra flourishes, for Jesselson told how on one occasion Abraham emerged with two policemen from a building housing one of Chicago's largest banks to turn over to Jesselson some of the "gold bullion," later identified as scrap iron.

Jesselson had invested $140,000 or more," he said, in Abraham's "syndicate," which he claimed was a $350,000,000 affair, dealing in real estate, diamonds and securities and backed by such nationally-known figures as Bernard Baruch.

Although he was sometimes suspicious, Jesselson said he didn't worry much about his investment because he thought he had some of the syndicate's gold bars hidden in his coal bin. When it began to appear that everything Abraham claimed was false, Jesselson tried a chisel on the gold and found it to be iron.

U. S. AIRPLANES DOWN FOUR JAP DIVING CRAFT

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7—As concealed enemy batteries began blasting American-held fortresses in Manila bay, the war department today disclosed that U. S. pursuit planes have shot down at least four enemy aircraft in sky battles over the Philippines and the Netherlands East Indies.

In the second aerial battle of its type in the southwestern Pacific, eight American P-40 pursuit planes fought a superior force of Japanese fighters and bombers over Bali, shooting down at least three enemy craft.

Over the Philippines, two of Gen. Douglas MacArthur's pursuit planes engaged in a duel with four Jap dive bombers, shooting down one of the Nipponese planes.

Mention of concealed enemy batteries on the southeastern shore of Manila bay in the war department's communique, indicated that the American fortresses in recent action failed to knock out all of the gun emplacements erected by the Japanese.

UTILITY NAMED IN TWO ACTIONS, RESULT OF BLAST

Two personal injury petitions, one for $13,899 and one for $7,426, were filed in Common Pleas court Saturday against the Ohio Fuel Gas company.

Plaintiffs of the two suits are Charles C. Sobers and his wife, Margie, now of Portsmouth, both severely burned in a gas explosion at 118 West High street on February 8, 1940.

Mrs. Sobers asks for damages totaling $13,899 for injuries she received in the explosion, charging that the accident was the result of gas accumulation in the bathroom of the residence, formerly the property of the late Mary M. Kuhns. Mrs. Sobers claims that employees of the gas company had inspected the lines in the house and had found leaks, but did nothing to repair them.

Mr. Sobers' petition carries a similar charge when he asks for $7,426 for injuries suffered as a result of the explosion. Mr. Sobers also has a suit for the same amount pending with the administrators of the Kuhns estate. Mrs. Sobers in a jury decision June 17, 1941, was awarded $8,700 from the Kuhns estate by the Common Pleas court.

SPEECHES MADE BY GOVERNMENT MEN CENSORED

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7—The White House, it was learned today, has clamped a war-time censorship on all speeches to be made henceforth by officials of the federal government, including such leading spokesmen as Secretary of State Hull, Secretary of the Navy Knox, and Secretary of the Interior Ickes.

In a memorandum to members of the cabinet and all government departments, bureaus and agencies, the White House directed that all speeches be submitted "for clearance well in advance" of delivery to Archibald MacLeish, poet, head of the library of congress, and now director of the office of facts and figures.

JAPS MASSING HEAVY FORCES FOR ASSAULT

Nipponese Turn Long Range Artillery Batteries On British Stronghold; Shells Landing In City Proper

LONDON, Feb. 7—The London Daily Sketch said today that Japanese parachute troops are massing on the Malay peninsula for an attack on Singapore island's four air-dromes.

The paper said strong British forces reinforced by tanks have been mustered to smash any Jap air-borne invasion.

SINGAPORE, Feb. 7—Shells from long-range Japanese guns fell in the outskirts and residential areas of Singapore city today while British guns hammered Japanese positions on the southern tip of the Malayan mainland.

A new communique issued by the far eastern command said that "our artillery engaged targets in southern Johore."

The announcement also said that British guns hammered Japanese forces in sampans (native boats) on the Strait of Johore.

These Jap forces evidently were attempting to stage raids on the island shoreline.

(Informed sources in London expressed belief the sampans that drew British fire in the Johore strait were operating in the same manner as British patrol launches, patrolling the area and seeking out information.)

(There was nothing to indicate this activity had any special significance or that it was part of any invasion attempt, London authorities said.)

The communique added that there was some Japanese shelling of Singapore's residential areas, not far from the heart of this teeming metropolis of 750,000 inhabitants.

Shelling Increases
The communique said an enemy battery had been silenced but that Japanese shelling of the Singapore fortress island had increased, causing damage and a few casualties on the northern section of the island.

While the British-Japanese artillery duel raged in new fury with heavy guns hurling destructive shells as much as 15 miles, Japanese planes raided Singapore anew today.

When the Japanese heavy guns went into action, the first shells began falling in the outskirts of Singapore city.

Later they found their way into the residential section. The city, located on the southern portion of Singapore island, is roughly 15 miles from the Jap gun emplacements around Johore Bahru on the southern tip of the Malayan mainland.

City Struck First Time

Today marked the first time that artillery shells have fallen near the city. Since the siege of Singapore began, however, the Japanese have sent many shells into the northern section of this besieged far eastern fortress.

This development indicated the Japs have now brought their long-range guns into position opposite Singapore island.

The shelling coincided with renewed Japanese air attacks on the Singapore fortress. It appeared the Japs were directing their fire toward the city in an effort to terrorize the civilian population.

In addition, one of their targets might be the municipal airport in the Katong area.

Observers believed the long-distance shelling marked another stage of the Japanese attempt to "soften up" Singapore in preparation for an invasion attempt.

Some quarters anticipated the Japs might even try an air-borne invasion, landing parachute troops on Singapore's four air-dromes.

Meanwhile, withdrawal of some men and equipment from the Singapore naval base and air fields because of Japanese bombardments was revealed by Lieut. (Continued on Page Eight)

VIOLENCE MARKS SCHOOL TROUBLE NEAR MANSFIELD

MANSFIELD, Feb. 7 — The village school board of Butler, 15 miles southeast of Mansfield, was to meet tonight to consider possible action to end the strike of 300 of its centralized high school's 452 pupils.

Two school board members, Kinsey Morgan and Rupert Roberts, were dragged from their car as they drove up to the school at the height of the disturbance and were beaten so badly by 10 or 12 men that they required treatment by a physician. The members said that pupils had no part in the attack against them.

Richland county school Supt. Boyd Robinson, who suspended classes temporarily, said that reopening of the school "and other possible measures" would be discussed. (Continued on Page Eight)

Later they found their way into the residential section. The city, located on the southern portion of Singapore island, is roughly 15 miles from the Jap gun emplacements around Johore Bahru on the southern tip of the Malay peninsula.

City Struck First Time
Today marked the first time that artillery shells have fallen near the city. Since the siege of Singapore began, however, the Japanese have sent many shells into the northern section of this besieged far eastern fortress.

This development indicated the Japs have now brought their long-range guns into position opposite Singapore island.

The shelling coincided with renewed Japanese air attacks on the Singapore fortress.

It appeared the Japs were directing their fire toward the city in an effort to terrorize the civilian population.

In addition, one of their targets might be the municipal airport in the Katong area.

Observers believed the long-distance shelling marked another stage of the Japanese attempt to "soften up" Singapore in preparation for an invasion attempt.

Some quarters anticipated the Japs might even try an air-borne invasion, landing parachute troops on Singapore's four air-dromes.

Meanwhile, withdrawal of some men and equipment from the Singapore naval base and air fields because of Japanese bombardments was revealed by Lieut.

VIOLENCE MARKS SCHOOL TROUBLE NEAR MANSFIELD

MANSFIELD, Feb. 7.—The village school board of Butler, 15 miles southeast of Mansfield, was to meet tonight to consider possible action to end the strike of 300 of its centralized high school's 452 pupils.

Two school board members, Kinsey Morgan and Rupert Roberts, were dragged from their car as they drove up to the school at the height of the disturbance and were beaten so badly by 10 or 12 men that they required treatment by a physician. The members said that pupils had no part in the attack against them.

Richland county school Supt. Boyd Robinson, who suspended classes temporarily, said that reopening of the school "and other possible measures" would be dis-

Ashville Clinches County League Title With Unblemished Slate

BRONKOS HALT SCIOTO THREAT IN 32-25 GAME

Pickaway Takes Runnerup Spot With Walnut In Third Position

Ashville high school held the undisputed Pickaway county cage league title Saturday after turning back a battling Scioto township team Friday night in a 32-25 thriller that saw the Broncos trailing most of the way, but having enough push in the last quarter to win going away. The game was played before a packed house at Ashville.

The Broncos are undefeated in 11 county league games, and naturally enter the annual county tournament as the team to beat.

The game which closed the Ashville league schedule was hard-fought the whole way. Ashville held a 5-4 lead at the quarter, but lost it at halftime. Scioto being ahead 17 to 11. The Broncos rallied in the third period to go ahead 23-22 as the last session started.

Captain Gene Wilson with 16 points led the way for the Dick Carter-coached youths.

Pickaway In Second

Pickaway clinched second place with a hard-earned 27-24 victory over Walnut on the latter's court. The first half ended 12-11, and both the last two quarters were ding-dong contests right down to the end, but Pickaway was good enough to gain the upper hand. Pickaway played without Gene Hall, a guard, and Walnut was without Bill Wharton, a forward, the former being ill and the latter out with a knee injury.

Darby township upset a crippled Washington township team 36 to 19 on the CHS court, Washington being without the services of Wharton and Brungs. Tracy, Liff and Graessle did all of Darby's scoring, while Bolender was tops for Washington.

New Holland turned on the heat to win 57-19 from Monroe, the Bulldogs grabbing a 28-9 lead at the halftime. Dennis and Ebert were hot, getting 37 points between them.

Jackson moved out of the coal hole with a 29-21 victory over Perry, the Fox postoffice boys running up a 24-8 score at the intermission. A last half rally by Perry was short.

Although another week of competition is scheduled in the county loop for 10 of the teams, county superintendents have announced their pairings for the annual tournament which opens at Perry township school, Atlanta, February 19.

Washington and Jackson are scheduled to open the tournament at 7 o'clock, the winner playing Ashville in the second round. New Holland and Perry will tangle in the 8 o'clock game the first night, the winner to meet the No. 3 team, which is Walnut township.

Second Bracket

In the second bracket Williamsport will take on Darby in the 9 o'clock bout, the winner playing the No. 2 team, which is Pickaway, and Monroe and Saltcreek will meet in the 10 o'clock contest, the winner meeting the No. 4 team, several teams being double-booked for this spot, and games scheduled next Friday night may make a difference in the final lineup for the tournament. The definite pairings will not, therefore, be known until after the contests next week.

Tigers Defeated 37 to 30 In Near Brawl

BLUE LIONS WIN AFTER TRAILING THROUGH GAME

Circleville Crowd Angered By Tactics Shown At Washington C. H.

Original Celtics, dressed in Circleville high uniforms, could not have defeated Washington C. H. Blue Lions Friday night on the Washington court. The cards just weren't dealt that way. The Tigers, fighting every inch of the way against odds that were too overwhelming, lost a 37-30 contest after leading until there were only four minutes to play.

An unsportsmanlike crowd that once "boomed" for six minutes while Don Valentine was trying to shoot a foul shot, two officials who went soft after the crowd started its protesting and from that time on were afraid to call fouls on the Blue Lions, and the tactics of Cow (Win in Any Manner Possible) Pearson, the Blue Lion coach, could be added up to give the Blue Lions the edge. Pearson spent part of his time on the court protesting to officials, but never a technical foul was called on him. Another part of the time he had his team manager standing outside the playing court waving a towel while Circleville boys were trying foul tosses.

Almost a Fight

The game came to an end in a near brawl, a Circleville fan grabbing Referee Bob Shea after one of his more lurid decisions, but trouble was averted. However, many influential Circleville fans who saw the game were loud in their demands that school officials break off relations with Washington C. H. Last year the same thing happened during a reverse game when poor officiating led cagers to start swinging fists.

The Tigers were playing like clockwork in the first half, running up a 12-4 lead at the period and holding an 18-11 margin at halftime. But the second half was different. Coach Pearson walked on the court with the officials as the third period started and apparently his conversation did some good, because everything went against the Red and Black from that point. Frank Geib, Tiger guard who had played a whale of a floor game in the first half, was waved to the bench when Referee Shea called three fouls in rapid fire manner on him. He had only one in the first half. The Tigers held an eight point lead at that time. A little later the same thing happened to Jim Carr, who had been fighting hard under the basket even when a couple of Blue Lion cagers were hanging on his arms. From then on the Tigers didn't have a chance.

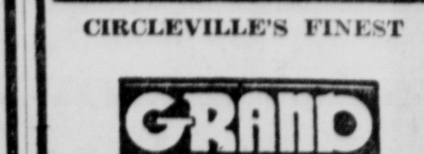

The Red and Black five was four points ahead as the third period ended, 25-21, Washington pulled up to 24-25, then Circleville went to 27-25 and then to 30-27, but that ended things. The Blue Lions scored 10 points while the Tigers didn't have a chance.

MANGRUM TAKES LEAD

PHOENIX, Ariz., Feb. 7.—Lloyd Mangrum, Chicago pro, showed the way to the nation's top golfers today as the $5,000 Western open went into its second round. With a brilliant 65, six under par, he was two strokes ahead of his nearest competitor, Ben Hogan of Hershey, Pa., who was golf's top money winner last year. Pressing close behind, with 68's, were Herman Kiser, Akron, O.; Ray Mangrum, Los Angeles; Chandler Harper, Portsmouth, Va.; Henry Picard, Oklahoma City; E. J. "Dutch" Harrison, Chicago, and Chick Harbert, Battle Creek, Mich.

Ashville Clinches County League Title With Unblemished Slate

BRONKOS HALT SCIOTO THREAT IN 32-25 GAME

Pickaway Takes Runnerup Spot With Walnut In Third Position

Ashville high school held the undisputed Pickaway county cage league title Saturday after turning back a battling Scioto township team Friday night in a 32-25 thriller that saw the Broncos trailing most of the way, but having enough push in the last quarter to win going away. The game was played before a packed house at Ashville.

The Broncos are undefeated in 11 county league games, and naturally enter the annual county tournament as the team to beat.

The game which closed the Ashville league schedule was hard-fought the whole way. Ashville held a 5-4 lead at the quarter, but lost it at halftime, Scioto being ahead 17 to 11. The Broncos rallied in the third period to go ahead 23-22 as the last session started.

Captain Gene Wilson with 16 points led the way for the Dick Carter-coached youths.

Pickaway in Second

Pickaway clinched second place with a hard-earned 27-24 victory over Walnut on the latter's court. The first half ended 12-11, and both the last two quarters were ding-dong contests right down to the end, but Pickaway was good enough to gain the upper hand. Pickaway played without Gene Hall, a guard, and Walnut was without Bill Wharton, a forward, the former being ill and the latter out with a knee injury.

Darby township upset a crippled Washington township team 36 to 19 on the CHS court, Washington being without the services of Wharton and Brungs. Tracy, Liff and Graessle did all of Darby's scoring, while Bolender was tops for Washington.

New Holland turned on the heat to win 57-19 from Monroe, the Bulldogs grabbing a 28-9 lead at the halftime. Dennis and Ebert were hot, getting 37 points between them.

Jackson moved out of the coal hole with a 29-21 victory over Perry. The Fox postoffice boys running up a 24-8 score at the intermission. A last half rally by Perry was short.

Although another week of competition is scheduled in the county loop for 10 of the teams, county superintendents have announced their pairings for the annual tournament which opens at Perry township school, Atlanta, February 19.

Washington and Jackson are scheduled to open the tournament at 7 o'clock, the winner playing Ashville in the second round. New Holland and Perry will tangle in the 8 o'clock game the first night, the winner to meet the No. 3 team, which is Walnut township.

Second Bracket

In the second bracket Williamsport will take on Darby in the 9 o'clock bout, the winner playing the No. 2 team, which is Pickaway, and Monroe and Salter Creek will meet in the 10 o'clock contest, the winner meeting the No. 4 team, several teams being deadlocked for this spot, and games scheduled next Friday night may make a difference in the final lineup for the tournament. The definite pairings will not, therefore, be known until after the contests next week.

Tigers Defeated 37 to 30 In Near Brawl

BLUE LIONS WIN AFTER TRAILING THROUGH GAME

Circleville Crowd Angered By Tactics Shown At Washington C. H.

Original Celtics, dressed in Circleville high uniforms, could not have defeated Washington C. H. Blue Lions Friday night on the Washington court. The cards just weren't dealt that way. The Tigers, fighting every inch of the way against odds that were too overwhelming, lost a 37-30 contest after leading until there were only four minutes to play.

An unsportsmanlike crowd that once "booed" for six minutes while Don Valentine was trying to shoot a foul shot, two officials who went soft after the crowd started its protesting and from that time on were afraid to call fouls on the Blue Lions, and the tactics of Cow (Win in Any Manner Possible) Pearson, the Blue Lion coach, could be added up to give the Blue Lions the edge. Pearson spent part of his time on the court protesting to officials, but never a technical foul was called on him. Another part of the time he had his team manager standing outside the playing court waving a towel while Circleville boys were trying foul tosses.

Almost a Fight

The game came to an end in a near brawl, a Circleville fan grabbing Referee Bob Shea after one of his more loud decisions, but trouble was averted. However, many influential Circleville fans who saw the game were loud in their demands that school officials break off relations with Washington C. H. Last year the same thing happened during a reserve game when poor officiating led cagers to start swinging fists.

The Tigers were playing like clockwork in the first half, running up a 12-4 lead at the period and holding an 18-11 margin at halftime. But the second half was different. Coach Pearson walked on the court with the officials as the third period started and apparently his conversation did some good, because everything went against the Red and Black from that point. Frank Geib, Tiger guard who had played a whale of a floor game in the first half, was waved to the bench when Referee Shea called three fouls in rapid fire manner on him. He had only one in the first half. The Tigers held an eight point lead at that time. A little later the same thing happened to Jim Carr, who had been fighting hard under the basket even when a couple of Blue Lion cagers were hanging on his arms. From then on the Tigers didn't have a chance.

The Red and Black five was four points ahead as the third period ended, 25-21, Washington pulled up to 24-25, then Circleville went to 27-25 and then to 30-27, but that ended things. The Blue Lions scored 10 points without the Tigers getting close to the net.

Younger Boys Used

Coach Roy Black started a freshman and sophomore reserve team and dropped a 46-20 decision, Washington C. H. height doing the trick. However, he felt pleased with the play of several of the younger lads and intends to start this team in all preliminaries from now to the end of the year.

Noted Presbyterian Leader To Come Here For Address Thursday Evening

Rev. James F. Riggs To Speak; Long Career Traced

The Rev. James F. Riggs, New York representative for united promotion in the Presbyterian church of the United States, comes to First Presbyterian church Thursday evening for a district Presbyterian church forum. The forum will be held in the social rooms of the church, beginning at 7:30. Delegates from the southern district of the Columbus Presbytery will attend. Churches represented will be Chillicothe, Amanda, Kingston, Greenfield and Washington C. H. The speaker will talk on "Church Finance."

The Rev. Mr. Riggs was associated with the Presbyterian board of national missions, first as director in the department of education and publicity, and then as field secretary for special work for the board's stabilization fund. In 1932 he began work as secretary of the youth budget plan committee of the general council. In 1938 and 1939 he was both field representative and director of the youth budget.

Family Active One

His service with the board and a wide missionary background have given Mr. Riggs a broad understanding of the problems and opportunities of missions both in America and abroad. He has a long life line of missionary forebears on both the home and foreign fields, one of whom was Stephen Riggs, who gave more than 40 years of his life to work among the Dakota Indians. Members of his family are now serving in Turkey, Syria, Egypt, Portuguese East Africa and other foreign lands.

Before going to the board of national missions, Mr. Riggs was a Presbyterian pastor at Little Falls, New York. He had served as director of missionary education both in the Presbytery of Utica and in the Synod of New York. His earlier pastorates included five years in Christ Presbyterian church, Catskill, New York, and six years as an assistant pastor in the Lafayette avenue Presbyterian church, Brooklyn. He is a graduate of Princeton university, where during his student days he tutored in English and the classics. For six months following graduation he traveled in Europe with his father, a professor in New Brunswick theological seminary. On his return he was a private tutor in Syracuse, after which service he taught in a reform school for wealthy boys near Allaben, New York. Later he was graduated from Princeton theological seminary.

Busy Sabbath in Capernaum

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Scripture—Mark 1:21-34; Luke 4:31-41.

By Alfred J. Buescher

While Christ taught in the synagogue at Capernaum, a man with an unclean spirit came in. Jesus called on the spirit to leave the man, and it threw him to the ground and came out.

All the people were amazed at the miracle, and questioned among themselves as to what this new doctrine and power was, for, said they, "even the unclean spirits do obey Him."

Coming from the synagogue, Jesus and His disciples went to the home of Simon Peter, whose wife's mother was sick of a fever. Jesus took her by the hand, and the fever left her.

The fame of the Lord spread all around the city, and as the sun was setting the citizens brought their sick and those possessed with devils, and He healed them. (GOLDEN TEXT—Rev. 1:10)

A Busy Sabbath in Capernaum

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON 2-7

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL
(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for Feb. 8 is Mark 1:21-34; Luke 4:31-41, the Golden Text being Revelations 1:10, "I was in the Spirit on the Lord's Day.")

CAPERNAUM, the location of the lesson for today, is on the Sea of Galilee, in the center of what then was the "manufacturing district of Palestine." It now is a heap of ruins, but in Jesus' time it was a populous little town on the caravan road which led to the Mediterranean.

Immediately after the four disciples, Simon Peter, Andrew, James and John, left their work and followed Him, they entered Capernaum and, as it was the Sabbath day, Jesus, as was his habit, led the way to the synagogue. The custom in the synagogue was that any Jew of good standing who had anything he thought worth saying, might have a hearing. Jesus immediately began to teach, and the people who heard Him were amazed at His teaching and the manner in which He talked. He "taught them as one that had authority, and not as the scribes" whose authority depended upon the authority of Moses.

Possibly in this synagogue the service had become what we call mere "lip service," all dull and dry, with no meaning to it, so that people mumbled their prayers not even thinking what they were saying. If so, it certainly was a marvel to them the things that Jesus said and His manner of speaking. What depth and sincerity were in His words! How glad those people must have been that they were able to attend the services on that day.

Unclean Spirit Knows Jesus
Now a more amazing thing happened, or so it must have seemed to those present. A man "possessed of an unclean spirit" dashed into the synagogue, and the spirit cried out, "Let us alone; what have we to do with Thee, Thou Jesus of Nazareth? art Thou come to destroy us? I know Thee who Thou art, the Holy One of God."

Quietly but at once Jesus "rebuked him," saying, "Hold thy peace, and come out of him." And upon that, the spirit threw the man on the floor, and left him. The persons present turned to one another, saying, "What thing is this? what new doctrine is this? for with authority commandeth He even the spirits, and they do obey Him. And immediately His fame spread abroad throughout all the region around Galilee."

Coming from the synagogue, the five went to the home of Simon, whose wife's mother was very ill with a fever. Those who loved and cared for her told Jesus of her condition, and He came to her bedside, took her by the hand, helped her to rise, and she was immediately healed. The fever left her, and her first act was to "minister unto them." Service in gratitude for what was done for her was evidently her first thought. Many of us have been ill and healed, not probably, with the Master's magic touch, but how many of us remember our weakness and dependence upon others during this time, and try to serve them when we are well, in thankfulness for it?

That evening, when the sun had set, and the Sabbath was officially over, all the people of the town crowded around Simon's doorstep, bringing those who were ill. "And all the city was gathered together at the door," says St. Mark. "And He healed many that were sick of divers diseases, and cast out many devils; and suffered not the devils to speak, because they knew Him."

Good always will overcome the powers of evil if we trust to it. When temptation assails us, for instance, if we turn our minds to Jesus and what He would have us do, or what He would do in the circumstances, and pray for strength to resist, how soon all desire for evil doing disappears, and we are anxious only to do what is right, and peace comes to us.

Noted Presbyterian Leader To Come Here For Address Thursday Evening

Rev. James F. Riggs To Speak; Long Career Traced

The Rev. James F. Riggs, New York representative for united promotion in the Presbyterian church of the United States, comes to First Presbyterian church Thursday evening for a district Presbyterian church forum. The forum will be held in the social rooms of the church, beginning at 7:30. Delegates from the southern district of the Columbus Presbytery will attend. Churches represented will be Chillicothe, Amanda, Kingston, Greenfield and Washington C. H. The speaker will talk on "Church Finance."

The Rev. Mr. Riggs was associated with the Presbyterian board of national missions, first as director in the department of education and publicity, and then as field secretary for special work for the board's stabilization fund. In 1932 he began work as secretary of the youth budget plan committee of the general council. In 1938 and 1939 he was both field representative and director of the youth budget.

Family Active One

His service with the board and a wide missionary background have given Mr. Riggs a broad understanding of the problems and opportunities of missions both in America and abroad. He has a long life line of missionary forebears on both the home and foreign fields, one of whom was Stephen Riggs, who gave more than 40 years of his life to work among the Dakota Indians. Members of his family are now serving in Turkey, Syria, Egypt, Portuguese East Africa and other foreign lands.

Before going to the board of national missions, Mr. Riggs was a Presbyterian pastor at Little Falls, New York. He had served as director of missionary education both in the Presbytery of Utica and in the Synod of New York. His earlier pastorates included five years in Christ Presbyterian church, Catskill, New York, and six years as an assistant pastor in the Lafayette avenue Presbyterian church, Brooklyn.

He is a graduate of Princeton university, where during his student days he tutored in English and the classics. For six months following graduation he traveled in Europe with his father, a professor in New Brunswick theological seminary. On his return he was a private tutor in Syracuse, after which service he taught in a reform school for wealthy boys near Allaben, New York. Later he was graduated from Princeton theological seminary.

Busy Sabbath in Capernaum

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Scripture—Mark 1:21-34; Luke 4:31-41.

By Alfred J. Buescher

While Christ taught in the synagogue at Capernaum, a man with an unclean spirit came in. Jesus called on the spirit to leave the man, and it threw him to the ground and came out.

All the people were amazed at the miracle, and questioned among themselves as to what this new doctrine and power was, for, said they, "even the unclean spirits do obey Him."

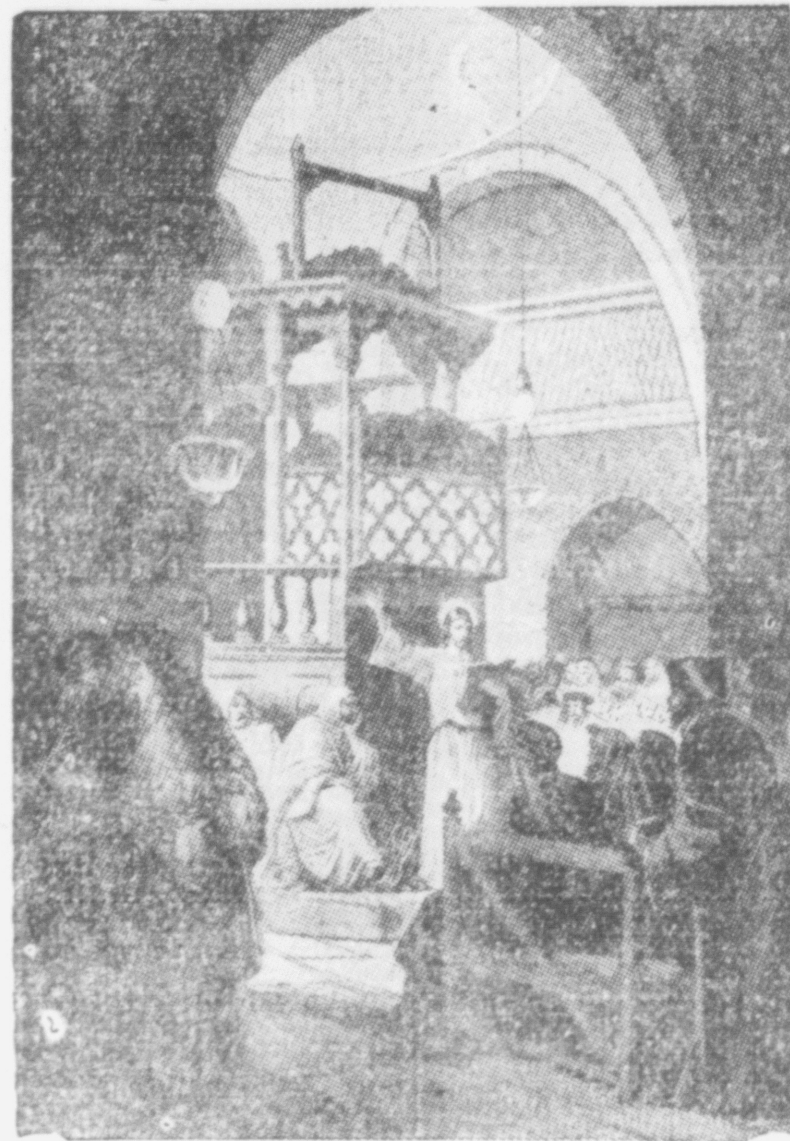

Coming from the synagogue, Jesus and His disciples went to the home of Simon Peter, whose wife's mother was sick of a fever. Jesus took her by the hand, and the fever left her.

The fame of the Lord spread all around the city, and as the sun was setting the citizens brought their sick and those possessed with devils, and He healed them. (GOLDEN TEXT—Rev. 1:10)

A Busy Sabbath in Capernaum

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON 2-7

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL
(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for Feb. 8 is Mark 1:21-34; Luke 4:31-41, the Golden Text being Revelations 1:10, "I was in the Spirit on the Lord's Day.")

CAPERNAUM, the location of the lesson for today, is on the Sea of Galilee, in the center of what then was the "manufacturing district of Palestine." It now is a heap of ruins, but in Jesus' time it was a populous little town on the caravan road which led to the Mediterranean.

Immediately after the four disciples, Simon Peter, Andrew, James and John, left their work and followed Him, they entered Capernaum, and as it was the Sabbath day, Jesus, as was his habit, led the way to the synagogue. The custom in the synagogue was that any Jew of good standing who had anything he thought worth saying, might have a hearing. Jesus immediately began to teach, and the people who heard Him were amazed at His teaching and the manner in which He talked. He "taught them as one that had authority, and not as the scribes" whose authority depended upon the authority of Moses.

Possibly in this synagogue the service had become what we call mere "lip service," all dull and dry, with no meaning to it, so that people mumbled their prayers not even thinking what they were saying. If so, it certainly was a marvel to them the things that Jesus said and His manner of speaking. What depth and sincerity were in His words! How glad those people must have been that they were able to attend the services on that day.

Unclean Spirit Knows Jesus

Now a more amazing thing happened, or so it must have seemed to those present. A man "possessed of an unclean spirit" dashed into the synagogue, and the spirit cried out, "Let us alone, what have we to do with Thee, Thou Jesus of Nazareth? art Thou come to destroy us? I know Thee who Thou art, the Holy One of God."

Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

to destroy us? I know Thee who Thou art, the Holy One of God." Quietly but at once Jesus "rebuked him," saying, "Hold thy peace, and come out of him." And upon that, the spirit threw the man on the floor, and left him. The persons present turned to one another, saying, "What thing is this? what new doctrine is this? for with authority commandeth He even the spirits, and they do obey Him. And immediately His fame spread abroad throughout all the region around Galilee."

That evening, when the sun had set, and the Sabbath was officially over, all the people of the town crowded around Simon's doorstep, bringing those who were ill. "And all the city was gathered together at the door," says St. Mark. "And He healed many that were sick of divers diseases, and cast out many devils; and suffered not the devils to speak, because they knew Him."

Good always will overcome the powers of evil if we trust to it. When temptation assails us, for instance, if we turn our minds to Jesus and what He would have us do, or what He would do for us in the circumstances, and pray for strength to resist, how soon all desire for evil doing disappears, and we are anxious only to do what is right, and peace comes to us.

PENSIONS

FALSE teeth, glass eyes, wooden legs and moth balls are appearing these days in Congressmen's mail. They are inspired by the recent passage by Congress of a self-pensioning plan. If, say some of their constituents, Congressmen are so old as need pensions, they probably need some of the traditional properties of old age.

Of course the problem is not quite so simple as all that. There is an argument for enabling our representatives to feel independent of temptation. Many a Congressman or senator, defeated for re-election after long service at Washington, finds his business or law practice gone when he goes home, and not much prospect of building it up. After all, congressmen are people, and the idea of pensioning helpless old age is getting widespread.

Much of the opposition is due to the time when this project is brought up. There is a suggestion of passing the measure when public attention is engaged elsewhere. Back in the Grant administration Congress won much odium from the so-called "back pay grab," when an increase of salary was voted to itself retroactively. It might not be a bad idea to postpone this congressional pension plan until it can get more discussion.

BLUNDERS WANTED

THE Germans are doing much better in this war than they did in the last. This is not precisely news, but it does seem odd that the losing country of World War I should be surpassing the former victors.

The answer is probably the fact that Hitler is ruling Germany now, and not the Kaiser. Liddell Hart, well-known British student of military strategy, says: "The Kaiser had much to answer for; but from a strictly German point of view, his worst sin was perhaps that by his lack of military judgment, and by his military selections, he undermined the strength of Germany's armed power and so prepared her downfall." The loss of the battle of the Marne was definitely due to the weakness of General Von Moltke, the Kaiser's personal choice as commander-in-chief.

Till lately Hitler has made no such mistakes. The removal of Von Brauchitsch as commander-in-chief in Russia may have been the first. It should be followed by more. A few German blunders would be very helpful just now.

WORLD AT A GLANCE

SPEAKING for John Bull, Winston Churchill has vigorously rubbed in the idea that the British, while unqualified for military unity with Russia against the Axis, want it distinctly understood that they are unilaterally opposed to any sort of political unity implying their indorsement of Communism.

President Roosevelt, on the opposite hand has steered pretty clear of the subject ever since the Soviet folk have lined up as one of the United Nations. Without in the least hinting at a criticism of Winston for the latter's outspokenness, it is understood he feels that, so far as he's concerned, silence relative to the different kinds of unity involved in the situation is more tactful than volubility would be just at present.

Now, I don't believe that even the most ardent anti-Communist suspects F. D. R. of the slightest sympathy with Moscow's governmental system and methods, except as they're employed to throw a crimp into the Nazis.

Nevertheless, I do hear some complaints that the Stalin regime is taking advantage of presidential reticence to attempt considerable missionary work in the United States. That it's making many converts isn't asserted, but of course, there always are a few susceptibles to any brand of propaganda, and the Communist-ants are extremely sensitive to their chirping. What makes 'em particularly sore is that the Soviet embassy in Washington is the source of a lot of literature in the form of an "Information Bulletin" issued daily or oftener to the press of the country.

Propaganda, Too
These releases purport to be purely war news, which, as it has been good of late, from the United Nations' standpoint, is welcome.

They do, though, contain a bit of what's fairly describable as propaganda. Illustratively, there was quite an eruption of it at the time of Moscow's recent gathering in commemoration of the death of Vladimir Lenin, the Soviet Republic's founder, 18 years ago.

It wasn't exactly a memorial, either. It was a glorification of Russian arms' victories over the Nazis, which was all right from the democracies' angle, since that was precisely what they wanted, and maybe it was an inspiration to still greater efforts by the Soviet soldiers in pursuing and lambasting the retreating hordes of Hitlerism. The keynote of Moscow's publicity, however, was vociferous emphasis upon the "proven success" of Communism. That class, scattered far and wide throughout the land, got the Communist-ants' goat, and then some. I imagine that not much of it was printed in American newspapers, but it landed, upon perhaps editorial desk in the nation.

What's more, there are several native Communist groups in our midst—not of any serious consequence, but noisy. They held Lenin memorial meetings, too, adopted

ARGENTINES ILL-INFORMED

RIO DE JANEIRO — There is a potent lesson for the United States in the experience of the American delegation with Argentine censorship.

The Argentine Government had imposed a strict censorship on all newspapers and radio stations regarding news of what actually took place among the Pan-American foreign ministers trying to break Axis relations at Rio. This censorship required that Argentine newspapers print only facts — no comment, no criticism of Argentine policy.

In fact the general censorship was so forbidding that, in reporting victories of the Russian army, newspapers were forbidden to publish news of a military advance unless the editor was in a position to prove personally the number of miles gained.

Opposed to this censorship were the U. S. delegation, the Brazilian delegation, in fact about 19 Pan-American foreign ministers who wanted the Argentine people to know the real truth about anti-Axis and anti-Argentine sentiment at Rio. Also opposed to the Argentine censorship was a young army of Buenos Aires newsmen and a majority of the Argentine delegation.

All of the above figured that the more the Argentine people knew about the attempt to isolate the Western Hemisphere from the Axis, the tougher it would be for the isolationist semi-dictatorship of Argentine's President Castillo to resist breaking relations.

In other words, the U. S. State Department and 90 percent of the other Pan-American foreign ministers were rooting for the basic principles of democracy — believing that if the people knew the truth, the people's reaction would be right. In fact, it was figured that the Argentine people's reactions would be so right and so over-whelming that President Castillo's government could not stand out against them.

SHORT WAVE BOTTLED

However, very little of what really happened at Rio de Janeiro got by the censors to the Argentine people. Various attempts were made to give Buenos Aires the truth. NBC's competent Buck Canel, speaking Spanish, broadcast the news by shortwave every night from Rio. But the Argentine Government required his broadcasts to be taken down in disc form and censored before they could be re-broadcast.

And when one of the Merry-Go-Rounds broadcast word that Congressman Tabor, head of the Argentine "Dies Committee," had come to Rio to try to tell the truth to the Argentine public; and how most of the Argentine delegation favored breaking with the Axis, the Argentine Government put up barriers against further shortwave broadcasts.

On the whole, the Argentine censorship was successful. It is doubtful that the majority of the Argentine people got wind

"Heart Disease" Often Is a False Diagnosis

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

AT THE beginning of Dr. Richard Cabot's book Facts on the Heart, he puts down the statement, "Most heart disease is imaginary."

Every practicing doctor who sees many patients knows that this is true. The words "heart disease" are fearsome sounds to most people and it is no wonder when some doctor makes a careless remark about a dropped beat in the pulse or a little rise in blood pressure or a queer sound in the heart, that this should create dread and foreboding.

Many kinds of instruments have been placed in the doctor's hands to use in examining the heart, and sometimes one doctor or another hasn't learned how to use these wisely. It was this sort of practice that caused an eminent American medical man to wish that the blood pressure instrument had never been invented and caused Sir James MacKenzie to say that the stethoscope had done more harm than good.

I find much wisdom in the list given by a Boston physician of various signs and symptoms apparently produced by the heart in its complicated work, but which do not necessarily mean heart disease.

Slow Pulse
For instance, there is slow pulse. A pulse as slow as fifty is commonly found in young athletes. Slow pulses are also regularly found in elderly people and in convalescents from any illness. Irregularity of the heart doesn't mean heart disease. There is one form of irregularity that occurs in over seventy-five per cent of young people in which the pulse is faster during inspiration of the breath than in expiration. At the other extreme of life, seventy-five per cent of people over fifty-five years old have an irregularity of the pulse in the form of dropped beat.

Disturbances of the heart sounds may be mistakenly called murmurs. The physician who tells a patient that he has a heart murmur or a valvular disease of the heart should be very certain of his ground. The heart makes all sorts of queer noises.

Twenty Abnormal Heart Sounds

Last week in pursuit of some studies in the auscultation of the heart, I made a list of some twenty abnormal sounds which the heart makes and which are not murmurs and are not dangerous and which nobody very thoroughly understands.

Pain in the chest nowadays is almost invariably put down to angina pectoris or coronary artery disease. As a matter of fact, pain and tenderness in the chest in young people is almost always functional or nervous in origin. Discomfort in the chest which is not due to heart disease is almost constant in some people and in most of them is usually aggravated by exertion.

Even if organic heart disease exists, it is not incompatible with long life. I saw a review in a medical journal the other day of the histories of twenty patients, all of whom were over eighty years of age, and all of whom had had a heart disease for some thirty to sixty years.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

E. E. B.:—"What causes a sty, are they contagious, and what is the best thing to do for them?"

Answer: Sties are caused by a staphylococcus infection in the hair follicle of the eyelash. They are not likely to be contagious to others, but when one of them comes along, it is very likely that self-contamination will occur by rubbing the eyes so that other eyelash follicles are infected. In the way of prevention, the best thing I know is to get a ten per cent solution of alcohol and a small camel's hair brush and when a person has a sty, brush the edges of the eyelid lightly two or three times a day with the brush after it has been dipped in the alcohol.

CHAPTER THIRTY-FOUR
"NO, NEIL, you mustn't do that. You can't leave Whitworths," Molla said. "You still have a great future ahead of you. This is all too small, too unimportant a reason to take a step like that."

"Too small, eh?" he said quite bitterly. "You have a strange idea of the magnitude of things."

It was snowing harder now. The horses' flanks were steaming. "Please do me a great favor, Molla. Try to forget that I ever kissed you, that I ever said the things I just did. I think that will help a great deal. It won't leave me with the feeling of futility that I now have."

"I'll try," she promised. Yes, she would try, she thought, but maybe he was asking too much. She'd know definitely when Tay was well again.

"You want to resign?" Burton Whitworth looked incredulous. "Well, what are you talking about? You just can't—"

He stopped for an instant. "But if you have a better position lined up, perhaps we can meet their offer. We're not going to let you get away without a fight."

Neil shook his head. "It's nothing like that. I'd rather work for you than any man in the world. Please don't force me to stab at some silly reason to satisfy you. Just allow me to state that my reasons are personal and let it go at that."

"Oh, personal, eh?" Burton Whitworth lit a cigar and glanced intently at the glowing end. "Somebody like falling in love with Molla Glendon, maybe?"

Neil jerked up in his seat. "Are you guessing?"

Burton Whitworth shook his head and smiled. "No, Neil, I'm not guessing. Maybe I'm just a wise old man who knows a lot more things than he's usually credited with knowing. Maybe I've one of those rare gifts of observation. Call it what you will, you haven't fooled me."

He flicked the ashes on his cigar. "You may have fooled Molla and yourself, but you have to get up a little earlier in the morning to sneak past me."

He leaned forward. "You are in love with her, aren't you?"

"Yes," Neil said flatly. "And when we get that dam built and the concrete passed for army approval I'm going to clear out."

"You are like the devil—and what are you going to do about Molla?"

Neil looked blank. "Nothing, of course."

"You're a fool—a silly, spineless fool, at that. Tay is my son, but by the great horned spoon, if you're in love with his fiancée, and you think she may be in love with you . . .

go ahead and do something about it. You've got the lives of three people to think about, not just your own. Don't be selfish."

"You're quite a guy," Neil said admiringly. "But I have no assurance that Molla is in love with me or has any intentions of falling in love with me."

"Well, sir, then I'd try to find out before it's too late," Burton Whitworth said whimsically.

"I have about as much subtlety as a tank. Just how do I go about that?" Neil asked sardonically.

"Eh? Well, that's your problem. That's where I fade out of the picture, because any advice I could give you wouldn't be worth your knowing what."

Neil left the city the day Tay came back to work. He stopped at Burton Whitworth's office to say goodbye. "I'll probably be gone about a week," he said. "We've selected that stream up near Poughkeepsie. It shouldn't take me more than four days to lay the ground work and see how Dr. Jordan is getting on with his concrete."

Whitworth nodded. "Good enough. And remember, check in by phone every day. It'll be easier for you to get us than for us to get you if something comes up."

Neil left then. He walked all the way through the outer office without once turning around. Molla watched him go. He hardly had spoken a word to her in almost a week. In fact, it appeared as though he had been trying to avoid her.

Molla looked after him until the door closed behind his back. She bit her lip and turned around to find Tay watching her.

"Something troubling you?" he asked coolly.

She was surprised. "Nothing is troubling me. I was just surprised that Neil didn't say goodbye when he left."

Tay leaned both arms over the railing above her desk. "Does that make such a terrible difference?"

She wanted to say yes. It was on the tip of her tongue, but somehow the words wouldn't come out. Instead, she said, "I merely thought it quite unusual."

He didn't say anything and turned away. He took two steps and came back. "By the way," he said pleasantly, "Mother wants me to bring you out for dinner tonight. I guess there are some things she wants to speak to you about."

"I'm sorry, but I'm busy tonight, Tay."

He frowned. "Something you can't break?"

It was only a movie with Enid Blair, but Molla shook her head. "Sorry. But how about tomorrow night?"

"Well, I guess that'll be okay."

Molla was quite silent riding out to Long Island with Tay the next night.

"What's the matter, Beautiful?" he asked. "Got the weight of the world on your mind?"

"Hardly that much," she told him. Suddenly she said, "Tay, are you really, tremendously in love with me?"

He was startled. "Good lord, of course. Why do you ask that?"

"Because when you were unconscious in that hospital in Georgia you said some things which made me think."

This time she could almost feel the tightness in his tone. "What did I say?" he asked quickly.

Molla stared straight ahead through the windshield as she spoke. "You must have been delirious. You thought you were speaking to that—Anthony girl you got drunk with. It sounded as though you were repeating your conversation with her, or at least part of it."

"What part?"

"The part," Molla said, "where you told her I was sweet enough to take a chance with . . . that you were willing to take the gamble . . . especially with three months in which to see how the dice would turn up."

She turned around to look at him then, but now it was his turn to stare straight ahead.

"I don't care to be a 'gamble,' Tay. I don't intend to be a trial bride, to be a subject of debate with yourself. I can't let you be that unfair to me."

He was silent. "Can't you say something?" she asked softly. "I believe I would feel much better if you would deny it."

"All right," he said finally. "Then I will deny it . . . in effect, I vaguely recall saying something like that to Clarice Anthony. But I was drunk when I said it. I couldn't have meant it. You're not going to let the stupid mutterings of a man in his cups spoil your happiness, are you?"

Her happiness, Molla reflected somewhat grimly, was exactly what she was interested in, and she knew full well that one who was drunk or delirious often made true statements of fact despite his condition.

"How can I be sure?" she asked hollowly.

He put one arm around her and drew her closer as he drove.

"Just take my word for it, Beautiful," he murmured.

Despite the reassurance of his voice, the pressure of his arm, Molla knew she wasn't convinced. She knew the beliefs which were then being framed in her mind, already were taking the shape of things to come.

PENSIONS
FALSE teeth, glass eyes, wooden legs and moth balls are appearing these days in Congressmen's mail. They are inspired by the recent passage by Congress of a self-pensioning plan. If, say some of their constituents, Congressmen are so old as need pensions, they probably need some of the traditional properties of old age.

Of course the problem is not quite so simple as all that. There is an argument for enabling our representatives to feel independent of temptation. Many a Congressman or senator, defeated for re-election after long service at Washington, finds his business or law practice gone when he goes home, and not much prospect of building it up. After all, congressmen are people, and the idea of pensioning helpless old age is getting widespread.

Much of the opposition is due to the time when this project is brought up. There is a suggestion of passing the measure when public attention is engaged elsewhere. Back in the Grant administration Congress won much odium from the so-called "back pay grab," when an increase of salary was voted to itself retroactively. It might not be a bad idea to postpone this congressional pension plan until it can get more discussion.

BLUNDERS WANTED
THE Germans are doing much better in this war than they did in the last. This is not precisely news, but it does seem odd that the losing country of World War I should be surpassing the former victors. The answer is probably the fact that Hitler is ruling Germany now, and not the Kaiser. Liddell Hart, well-known British student of military strategy, says: "The Kaiser had much to answer for; but from a strictly German point of view, his worst sin was perhaps that by his lack of military judgment, and by his military selections, he undermined the strength of Germany's armed power and so prepared her downfall." The loss of the battle of the Marne was definitely due to the weakness of General Von Moltke, the Kaiser's personal choice as commander-in-chief. Till lately Hitler has made no such mistakes. The removal of Von Brauchitsch as commander-in-chief in Russia may have been the first. It should be followed by more. A few German blunders would be very helpful just now.

Propaganda, Too
These releases purport to be purely war news, which, as it has been good of late, from the United Nations standpoint, is welcome. They do, though, contain a bit of what's fairly describable as propaganda.

Illustratively, there was quite an eruption of it at the time of Moscow's recent gathering in commemoration of the death of Vladimir Lenin, the Soviet Republic's founder, 18 years ago. It wasn't exactly a memorial, either. It was a glorification of Russian arms' victories over the Nazis, which was all right from the democracies' angle, since that was precisely what they wanted, and maybe it was an inspiration to still greater efforts by the Soviet leaders in pursuing and lambasting the retreating hordes of Hitlerism. The keynote of Moscow's publicity, however, was vociferous emphasis upon the "proven success" of Communism. That class, scattered far and wide throughout the land, got the Communist-anti-God, and then some. I imagine that not much of it was printed in American newspapers, but it landed, though perhaps it wasn't read, upon every editorial desk in the nation.

What's more, there are several native Communist groups in our midst—not of any serious consequence, but noisy. They held Lenin memorial meetings, too, adapted

ARGENTINES ILL-INFORMED
RIO DE JANEIRO — There is a potent lesson for the United States in the experience of the American delegation with Argentine censorship.

The Argentine Government had imposed a strict censorship on all newspapers and radio stations regarding news of what actually took place among the Pan-American foreign ministers trying to break Axis relations at Rio. This censorship required that Argentine newspapers print only facts — no comment, no criticism of Argentine policy.

In fact the general censorship was so forbidding that, in reporting victories of the Russian army, newspapers were forbidden to publish news of a military advance unless the editor was in a position to prove personally the number of miles gained.

Opposed to this censorship were the U. S. delegation, the Brazilian delegation, in fact about 19 Pan-American foreign ministers who wanted the Argentine people to know the real truth about anti-Axis and anti-Argentine sentiment at Rio. Also opposed to the Argentine censorship were a young army of Buenos Aires newsmen and a majority of the Argentine delegation.

All of the above figured that the more the Argentine people knew about the attempt to isolate the Western Hemisphere from the Axis, the tougher it would be for the isolationist semi-dictatorship of Argentine's President Castillo to resist breaking relations.

In other words, the U. S. State Department and 90 percent of the other Pan-American foreign ministers were rooting for the basic principles of democracy — believing that if the people knew the truth, the people's reaction would be right. In fact, it was figured that the Argentine people's reactions would be so right and so over-whelming that President Castillo's government could not stand out against them.

SHORT WAVE BOTTLED

However, very little of what really happened at Rio de Janeiro got by the censors to the Argentine people. Various attempts were made to give Buenos Aires the truth. NBC's competent Buck Canel, speaking Spanish, broadcast the news by shortwave every night from Rio. But the Argentine Government required his broadcasts to be taken down in disc form and censored before they could be re-broadcast.

And when one of the Merry-Go-Rounds broadcast word that Congressman Taborda, head of the Argentine "Dies Committee," had come to Rio to try to tell the truth to the Argentine public; and how most of the Argentine delegation favored breaking with the Axis, the Argentine Government put up barriers against further shortwave broadcasts.

On the whole, the Argentine censorship was successful. It is doubtful that the majority of the Argentine people got wind

DIET AND HEALTH

"Heart Disease" Often Is a False Diagnosis

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

AT THE beginning of Dr. Richard Cabot's book Facts on the Heart, he puts down the statement, "Most heart disease is imaginary."

Every practicing doctor who sees many patients knows that this is true. The words "heart disease" are fearsome sounds to most people and it is no wonder when some doctor makes a careless remark about a dropped beat in the pulse or a little rise in blood pressure or a queer sound in the heart, that this should create dread and foreboding.

Many kinds of instruments have been placed in the doctor's hand to use in examining the heart, and sometimes one doctor or another hasn't learned how to use these wisely. It was this sort of practice that caused an eminent American medical man to wish that the blood pressure instrument had never been invented and caused Sir James MacKenzie to say that the stethoscope had done more harm than good.

I find much wisdom in the list given by a Boston physician of various signs and symptoms apparently produced by the heart in its complicated work, but which do not necessarily mean heart disease.

Slow Pulse
For instance, there is slow pulse. A pulse as slow as fifty is commonly found in young athletes. Slow pulses are also regularly found in elderly people and in convalescents from any illness. Irregularity of the heart doesn't mean heart disease. There is one form of irregularity that occurs in over seventy-five per cent of young people in which the pulse is faster during inspiration of the breath than in expiration. At the other extreme of life, seventy-five per cent of people over fifty-five years old have an irregularity of the pulse in the form of dropped beat.

Disturbances of the heart sounds may be mistakenly called murmurs. The physician who tells a patient that he has a heart murmur or a valvular disease of the heart should be very certain of his

"NO, NEIL, you mustn't do that. You can't leave Whitworth's," Molla said. "You still have a great future ahead of you. This is all too small, too unimportant a reason to take a step like that."

"Too small, eh?" he said quite bitterly. "You have a strange idea of the magnitude of things." It was snowing harder now. The horses' flanks were steaming. "Please do me a great favor, Molla. Try to forget that I ever kissed you, that I ever said the things I just did. I think that will help a great deal. It won't leave me with the feeling of futility that I now have."

"I'll try," she promised. Yes, she would try, she thought, but maybe he was asking too much. She'd know definitely when Tay was well again.

"You want to resign?" Burton Whitworth looked incredulous. "Neil, what are you talking about? You just can't—"

He stopped for an instant. "But if you have a better position lined up, perhaps we can meet their offer. We're not going to let you get away without a fight."

Neil shook his head. "It's nothing like that. I'd rather work for you than any man in the world. Please don't force me to stab at some silly reason to satisfy you. Just allow me to state that my reasons are personal and let it go at that."

"Oh, personal, eh?" Burton Whitworth lit a cigar and glanced intently at the glowing end. "Some think like falling in love with Molla Glendon, maybe."

Neil jerked upright in his seat. "Are you guessing?" Burton Whitworth shook his head and smiled. "No, Neil, I'm not guessing. Maybe I'm just a wise old man who knows a lot more things than he's usually credited with knowing. Maybe I've one of those rare gifts of observation. Call it what you will, you haven't fooled me."

He flicked the ashes on his cigar. "You may have fooled Molla and yourself, but you have to get up a little earlier in the morning to sneak past me."

He leaned forward. "You are in love with her, aren't you?" "Yes," Neil said flatly. "And when we get that dam built and the concrete passed for army approval I'm going to clear out."

"You are like the devil—and what are you going to do about Molla?" Neil looked blank. "Nothing, of course."

"You're a fool—a silly, spineless fool, at that. Tay is my son, but by the great horned spoon, if you're in love with his fiancée, and you think she may be in love with you . . .

go ahead and do something about it. You've got the lives of three people to think about, not just your own. Don't be selfish."

"You're quite a guy," Neil said admiringly. "But I have no assurance that Molla is in love with me or has any intentions of falling in love with me."

"Well, sir, then I'd try to find out before it's too late," Burton Whitworth said whimsically. "I have about as much subtlety as a tank. Just how do I go about that?" Neil asked sardonically.

"Eh? Well, that's your problem. That's where I fade out of the picture, because any advice I could give you wouldn't be worth you knowing what."

Neil left the city the day Tay came back to work. He stopped at Burton Whitworth's office to say goodbye. "I'll probably be gone about a week," he said. "We've selected that stream up near Poughkeepsie. It shouldn't take me more than four days to lay the ground work and see how Dr. Jordan is getting on with his concrete."

Whitworth nodded. "Good enough. And remember, check in by phone every day. It'll be easier for you to get us than for us to get you if something comes up."

Neil left. He walked all the way through the outer office without once turning around. Molla watched him go. He hardly had spoken a word to her in almost a week. In fact, it appeared as though he had been trying to avoid her.

Molla looked after him until the door closed behind his back. She bit her lip and turned around to find Tay watching her.

"Something troubling you?" he asked coolly.

She was surprised. "Nothing is troubling me. I was just surprised that Neil didn't say goodbye when he left."

Tay leaned both arms over the railing above her desk. "Does that make such a terrible difference?"

She wanted to say yes. It was on the tip of her tongue, but somehow the words wouldn't come out. Instead, she said, "I merely thought it quite unusual."

He didn't say anything and turned away. He took two steps and came back. "By the way," he said pleasantly, "Mother wants me to bring you out for dinner tonight. I guess there are some things she wants to speak to you about."

"I'm sorry, but I'm busy tonight, Tay."

He frowned. "Something you can't break?"

It was only a movie with Enid Blair, but Molla shook her head. "Sorry. But how about tomorrow night?"

"Well, I guess that'll be okay."

E. E. B.:—"What causes a sty, are they contagious, and what is the best thing to do for them?"
Answer: Sties are caused by a staphylococcus infection in the hair follicle of the eyelash. They are not likely to be contagious to others, but when one of them comes along it is very likely that self-contagion will occur by rubbing the eyes so that other eyelash follicles are infected. In the way of prevention, the best thing I know is to get a ten per cent solution of alcohol and a small camel's hair brush and when a person has a sty, brush the edges of the eyelid lightly two or three times a day with the brush after it has been dipped in the alcohol.

Group Gathers At Boggs Home For Meeting

Despite inclement weather 35 members of the Pickaway County Garden club gathered Friday at the home of Mrs. John Boggs, West Union street, for a splendid meeting. The program featured the showing of two series of pictures of "Flower Arrangements" by Frank Lynch, and a playlet, "In Punkin Center," under the direction of Mrs. Blanche Molschman.

Mrs. Smith Hulise was in the chair for a brief business meeting. Mrs. Ruth Morris, secretary, read her report and called the roll. Mrs. James P. Moffitt, Mrs. George Stealey and Mrs. G. G. Campbell were members of the cast for the delightfully humorous play.

The informal social hour was concluded with refreshments served by Mrs. Boggs assisted by Mrs. Meeker Terwilliger, Mrs. Orion King, Mrs. Donald H. Watt, Mrs. George Roth, Mrs. Fred Cook and Mrs. C. M. Beatty.

The March session will be at the home of Miss Morris, Salt-creek township and will feature a debate—"Resolved that Vegetables Have Just as Important a Place in the Garden as Flowers." Mrs. F. K. Blair and Mrs. E. O. Crites comprise the affirmative team and Mrs. Turney Pontius and Mrs. Clarence McAbee, the negative.

Zelda Bible Class
Mrs. Lee Shaner read an excellent paper on "Old Jewelry" at the meeting of the Zelda Bible class Friday in the parlor of the Methodist church. She discussed types of jewelry of the early Egyptian and Bible times, told of the camels and the various birth stones, and concluded her interesting talk with items concerning modern jewelry. She displayed many antique pieces and many were shown by class members.

Twenty-six members were present. Mrs. Paul Johnson reading the scripture lesson from Jeremiah. During the business hour, plans were made for charitable work for the next few months, sewing being part of the project for helping the needy of Circleville. Mrs. Johnson gave several quotations and told short stories concerning Washington and Lincoln.

Mrs. Edwin Bach reported as secretary-treasurer. Miss Reba Lee played the piano accompaniment for the group singing of patriotic songs.

A salad course was served at small tables decorated in patriotic appointments.

Mrs. W. L. Sprouse will be chairman for the March session and Mrs. O. J. Towers will arrange the program.

Hedges Chapel W. S. C. S.

The Woman's Society for Christian Service of Hedges Chapel met at the church Thursday with Mrs. Homer Reber presiding. During the business hour, Mrs. Ray Plum was appointed leader of the new department of the association, "The Status of Woman." U. S. WOMEN SHORTER, BROADER

Washington may have been turned upside down by the turmoil of the war effort, but the department of agriculture has found time to digress from the humdrum of regular agricultural research to discover, so it says, that the "mean" physique of American women is considerably shorter and broader—woman are, height, five feet three inches; weight, 133½ pounds; neck, 15½ inches; bust, 35½ inches; waist, 29½ inches; hips, 38½ inches. Two Waiter Thornton models demonstrate the two types, above: Joan O'Neill, left, represents the "mean" woman. Jane Quick, the glamor type.

STARS SAY—

For Saturday, February 7
DOMESTIC, social and sentimental matters are to the fore, with portent of sorrow, bereavement illness of loss, affecting the home and social contacts primarily. There is danger of scandal, rumors and other detriments to the reputation, unless particular attention be paid to discreet and circumspect conduct, especially avoiding illicit affairs with the opposite sex. Shun all sorts of excesses and indulgences in private relations.

Those whose birthday it is may avert regrettable experiences and adventures in their private lives by adhering to discretion and precaution in all personal contacts of intimate nature. Failure in this may produce sorrow, bereavement, illness, loss and disappointment, especially in connection with scandal or rumors affecting the reputation. Be tactful, reserved and circumspect in all relations.

For Sunday, February 8
SUNDAY'S horoscope is not a fortunate one, holding sign of difficulties in travel, with agencies, superiors and elders, also danger of accidents, falls, fires or other injuries, unless particularly watchful and alert. Make no changes, and guard against illness from colds, congestions or rheumatic pains. There may be loss, disappointment and morbidity.

Those whose birthday it is may not expect a favorable year, since loss, grief, illness and disappointment are presaged. Take care of the health and possessions and safeguard the physical well-being, as accident or fall, fire or theft is possible. Postpone change and travel.

A child born on this day may have to endure many vicissitudes in life. It should have fortitude and courage instilled early in life, with optimistic philosophy, as it may be morose or sullen.

School Time Schedule Changes

SCHOLARS HEAR AND SEE TYPIST, AMATEUR CHAMP

Together with twenty-some pupils and teachers visiting from Scioto township school, Circleville high school students who had free periods at 9:30 Wednesday gathered in the auditorium to see the world's champion amateur typist and his work.

Twenty-nine year old Chester Soucek, "the fastest thing on keys," demonstrated the proper technique of typing to have more words per minute and less mistakes, too.

His first suggestion was to sit at the typewriter in a relaxed position, avoiding fatigue, thus leaving all your energy to your work.

Using a standard typewriter equipped with a hollow cylinder, so each clack of a key could be heard, Mr. Soucek tapped out his rhythm on the keyboard. He stated that to type as fast as possible, brain and muscles must be coordinated by rhythm, giving the work a smooth speed.

After relating that the shifting of the eyes from copy to typewriter would slow one down and that concentration was invaluable, he proceeded to type at different speeds.

Following his imitation of a bearded typist or "how not to do it," he typed at the rate of 138 words a minute with a coin lying on the back of his hand, proving that his punching motion was in his fingers, not his wrist.

Mr. Soucek got his education in the Corapolis, Pennsylvania high school, smaller than Circleville high, and Duquesne university. Now he is touring the country so that other typists may benefit from his experiences.

He has held the accuracy championship for the past three years. He won this position at the last International Typewriting Contest at Toronto, Canada, when he typed a record of 134 words per minute for one solid hour. He had punched 41,485 keys with an accuracy percentage of 99.9 percent.

THIS IS ROUTINE OF HI-Y MEETING

Bam! Bam! Bam! Bam! goes the gavel of President Betz. "The meeting will come to order." This routine begins the Hi-Y meeting every Monday. Virgil Wolfe the Sergeant-at-arms, sits at a desk ready to charge a penny to any unwary boy who expostulates without the necessary formality of raising his hand. After Secretary David Orr finishes calling the roll and reading the minutes of the preceding meeting, President Betz begins the business discussion.

At Monday's meeting Hi-Y members decided that next week new members will be voted in. The old members will make their appearance at two churches this month. The first of these will be the Lutheran church, February 8, and the second the Catholic church some time later in the month.

At the completion of the business discussion the Lord's Prayer is spoken and the boys are dismissed.

EDITORIAL
FREEDOM

Freedom is not something merely to be read about in a book or talked about in speeches as it is often done in schools. If it is to be real, it must be practiced where busy men and women work to live. If it is to persist, it must be so used as to contribute to the satisfaction of reasonable human needs. In the use of freedom, also in the defense of freedom, every member of a free society has his individual responsibility.

We, the youth, are the future leaders of this country. We must pioneer for ourselves as every generation of Americans before us has pioneered. But if, from the indolence, or carelessness, or cowardice, or want of public spirit, we are unequal to the exertions necessary for preserving free government; if we will not fight for it when it is directly attacked; if we, by momentary discouragement, or panic, or a fit of enthusiasm for an individual, can be induced to lay our liberties at the feet even of a great man; in all of these cases we are more or less unfit for liberty. We must drop that "don't care" attitude and be ready to take our place in life.

RESERVES PLAN ANNUAL AFFAIR

President Dorothy Cook opened the weekly meeting of the Senior Reserve club Thursday.

Various topics relating to the Sweetheart Dance, which will be Saturday, February 14, were discussed, and several committee chairmen made their reports.

Doris Hendricks will replace Dorothy Reid on the selling committee for the dance.

Betty Moeller, secretary, announced that any girl wishing to buy a pin should place her order within the next few days.

A secret ballot was taken to elect a Queen of Hearts, who will reign over the Sweetheart dance. This ceremony has become a tradition in Circleville high school, and a senior is elected each year for this honor. Both the Junior and Senior Girl Reserve clubs vote and the ballots are counted by the two club advisers, Miss Alice Roof and Miss Elma Rains. No one but these teachers will know the result until the night of the dance.

Marvne Hennessey presented an informative talk on a few side-lights of the German invasions of Russia. She discussed the various method and results of guerrilla warfare and related several thrilling episodes, which prove the heroism of the civilians of Russia.

C. H. S. TO PLAY BENEFIT GAME

At the regular meeting of the Stodge club this week the boys discussed and completed plans for a Red Cross benefit basketball game, which will be Tuesday evening. Chillicothe Catholic Central and Circleville high teams will oppose each other. Otto Gunther and Robert Goeller will take and sell tickets at the gate.

March 5 is the date of the annual Stodge benefit dinner. President Frank Gebel appointed a committee to report on food prices for the dinner. David Betz is the chairman of the committee and his assistants are James Morrison and John Boggs.

Next week the meeting, which is on Thursday, will be at Stewart Martin's. This week's meeting was at James Morrison's.

CLASS MEMBERS TO SELECT PLAY

David Orr, junior class president, Amanda Cayce, George Helwage, Anne Hott, Walter Leist, Patty Owens, Anna Sue Reichelderfer, Betty Waters and David Yates comprise the committee for the selection of the play which the class will present the second or third week in March, according to plans.

Tryouts, held Thursday and Friday evening after school, will continue throughout next week.

Samuel Johnson, dramatic and speech director, said the play would in all probability be a comedy. The selection will be announced next week by the play committee.

MGM PRESENTS PROGRAM

Thursday morning at 11:10, a manager of a local theatre presented a representative of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios to the high school student body and faculty. He talked on "The Educational Value of Motion Pictures." In order to fully appreciate the background and effort put forth to produce a picture, the speaker believes we should study the settings and costumes.

DEBATE GOES TO NORTH

Once more the Circleville high school debaters are away from town. This time they journeyed to Columbus North high school for another tournament. Samuel R. Johnson, speech and dramatic coach, has taken but one team to this tourney. This team consist William Burget, Marvne Hennessey, Martha Pile and Ned Stout.

Farming in Southern Ohio

BY THOMAS E. BEERY

Thin Pigs

I was on a southern Ohio farm last week, where 80 pigs were being wintered. They had a bal-anced ration in a self feeder, plen-ty of warm spring water near it, and comfortable beds, in which to rest and sleep; and yet there were several thin pigs in the bunch. Just a week later I was on the same farm and the owner said, "Look at those small pigs. They have gone back a lot in a week's time. They are going the wrong way and I've got to do something or they will die."

This briefly describes a con-dition that you will find on many corn belt farms, at this time of the year, especially where late fall pigs, that are being wintered. What is the best thing to do, if you have a condition like this on your farm?

A very successful hog raiser says that he used to take these small, thin, pigs out and keep them in a warm stall in the barn for awhile; and sometimes they "Snapped out of it" and some-times they developed a cough and died. He gets the best results by separating them from the others, but keeping them in a comfortable house, on the range and in a field where no hogs have been, since it was in the rotation, and self feeding them with a ration high in protein, than the one usually used. He says that he likes to slop them, too, for awhile, using this high protein ration. If he has a surplus of skim milk, he slops them with this for a few weeks, and they usually come back on their feed, and do all right.

Of course finding out why the pig is thin, is the big thing to do. They may have had pneu-monia, or they may have worms and need "Cleaning out", but the big thing to do is to get them built up by separating them from the others, and giving them some extra care, as pointed out, before you give them much treatment.

"An 'Ex' Car Chaser"

That's the way I descried a dog to the driver of my car, when a farm dog, lame in one front foot, hurried out to bark at our car, as we passed. He had evi-dently been hurt by an automobile, for he kept some distance from us.

Did you ever notice that a dog that chases automobiles doesn't live very long? Chasing automo-biles on our hard surfaced, slick highways, is a hazardous thing to do, but when a dog once forms the habit it is hard to break him from it, and a good farm dog has his period of usefulness terminated, in a tragic manner.

Some of our readers may know how to break a dog from chasing automobiles. If they do, we will be glad to learn their method, for the information of our many readers of a chain of southern Ohio papers that publish this column. Thank you.

Hog Houses

We just passed a Fayette coun-ty farm, near Washington C. H. where we saw this. The hogs had eaten a lot of the hay, too. It was a very cold day, and the ground was frozen and covered with a light snow, which kept hogs from grazing in the fields, but the brood sows at this farm, were getting their protein rough-age, anyway.

I have been on several farms this winter where alfalfa or clover hay is fed in racks to the brood sows, which is a good farm prac-tice.

Tractor Cabs

Our readers will recall an ar-ticle that I wrote about a year ago, describing a tractor cab, that a southern Ohio farmer had built on his tractor. He was so well pleased with it, and it was so in-expensive and satisfactory, that I got into the field of prophecy a little, and predicted that cabs on tractors would soon be standard equipment.

You can imagine how pleased I was last week, when I called at the firm of N. N. Sams and Son of Hillsboro, Ohio, and saw an International tractor, equipped with a cab, that only costs $40.00, and that will last as long as the tractor. It can be removed by just taking off a few bolts, and it is so light in construction that this is not a hard job, and it doesn't add very much to the load of the tractor.

It doesn't interfere with the vi-sion of the operator, either. One can drive the tractor all day in a cold wind and not mind it very much; or, if he is caught out in a rain, he could pull down the can-vass curtains and keep dry.

I am going to make one more prediction. These tractor cabs will be very popular and we are going to see a lot of them in the corn belt.

Good Winter Feeding Hog Record

Glenn Hizer, Hillsboro, R. F. D., far out in eastern Highland coun-ty, fed a litter of nine pigs this winter that averaged 209 pounds, when they lacked a day of being five months old. How is that for a record?

The ration used was made by mixing one fourth part of ground wheat and three fourths ground corn, and fed eleven parts to one of a 40 per cent protein supple-ment, in a self feeder. A com-mercial mineral mixture was in the other compartment, and plenty of water was near the feeder.

These hogs were on range and on clean ground. Mr. Hizer likes to feed his hogs on range but, not too much range, or they will run all of the fat off, he says.

No. 27

Expenses Of Farmers

A farmer who operates a farm for profit is entitled to deduct from gross income as necessary expenses all amounts expended (other than those constituting capital expenditures) in the carrying on of the business of farming. The cost of feeding and raising livestock may be treated as an expense deduction insofar as such costs represent actual outlay, but not including the value of farm produce grown upon the farm or the labor of the taxpayer. Also deductible is the cost of seed, minor repairs to farm buildings (other than the dwelling of the farmer), and small tools used up in the course of a year or two.

The cost of fuel and oil used for farm work, as well as repairs and maintenance of farm machinery, is deductible as a business expense; but the cost of farm machinery, equipment, and farm buildings represents a capital investment and is not an allowable deduction. The cost, however, may be recovered by depreciation allowances.

The cost of gasoline, repairs and upkeep of an automobile if used wholly in connection with the taxpayer's farm operations, as well as depreciation thereon, may be deducted, but if an automobile is used partly for business and partly for pleasure or the convenience of the taxpayer or his family, the cost of operation may be ap-portioned according to the extent of the use for purposes of business and for pleasure or convenience, and the portion attributable to business will be deductible as a necessary business expense.

The cost of hired laborers and hired machines on a farm and the part of the board which is pur-chased for hired laborers are de-ductible. The value of products furnished by the farm and used in the board of hired laborers is not a deductible expense. Rations purchased and furnished to labor-ers or sharecroppers are deduct-ible as a part of the labor ex-pense. Amounts paid to persons engaged in household work to the extent that their services are used in boarding and otherwise caring for farm laborers are deductible, but amounts paid for services of such employees engaged in caring for the farmer's own household are not a deductible expense.

Amounts expended in the de-velopment of farms, orchards, and ranches prior to the time when the productive state is reached may be regarded as investments of cap-ital. The cost of planting trees, as well as the amounts expend-ed by a farmer in the restoration of soil fertility preparatory to ac-tual production of crops and the cost of liming soil to increase pro-ductiveness over a period of years are capital expenditures; but the cost of commercial fertilizers, the benefit of which is of short dura-tion and which have to be used every year or so, even after a farm reaches the productive state, is deductible as an expense.

Amounts expended in purchas-ing work, breeding, or dairy ani-mals are regarded as investments of capital and may be depreciat-ed unless such animals are includ-ed in inventory.

Farming in Southern Ohio
BY THOMAS E. BEERY

Thin Pigs
I was on a southern Ohio farm last week, where 80 pigs were being wintered. They had a balanced ration in a self feeder, plenty of warm spring water near it, and comfortable beds, in which to rest and sleep; and yet there were several thin pigs in the bunch. Just a week later I was on the same farm and the owner said, "Look at those small pigs. They have gone back a lot in a week's time. They are going the wrong way and I've got to do something or they will die."

This briefly describes a condition that you will find on many corn belt farms, at this time of the year, especially where late fall pigs, that are being wintered. What is the best thing to do, if you have a condition like this on your farm?

A very successful hog raiser says that he used to take these small, thin, pigs out and keep them in a warm stall in the barn for awhile; and sometimes they "Snapped out of it" and some-times they developed a cough and died. He gets the best results by separating them from the others, but keeping them in a comfortable house, on the range and in a field where no hogs have been, since it was in the rotation, and self feeding them with a ration higher in protein, than the one usually used. He says that he likes to slop them, too, for awhile, using this high protein ration. If he has a surplus of skim milk, he slops them with this for a few weeks, and they usually come back on their feet, and do all right.

Washington Merry-Go-Round
of the critical and isolationist position in which their government was placed at Rio. In time, of course, this news will leak through, but it did not leak through soon enough to take effect.

MORAL OF U. S. A.
The moral of this difficult cen-sorship situation was not missed by various Pan-American dele-gates—namely, if you are fighting a war to defeat Hitlerism, you lose the democratic principles for which you are fighting if you throttle the press.

Fortunately and wisely, Presi-dent Roosevelt has been broad-minded when it comes to press criticism, and today censorship in the U. S. A. has not throttled criticism. Paradoxically, the only attempt to stifle U. S. press criticism came from the same State Department which was trying to encourage Argentine press criticism at Rio de Janeiro. This was when the censorship board last month tried to bar unfavorable comment on Hull's appeasement policy with the Vichy government in France. When and if the State Depart-ment should ever get its way on this, the American public would be in the same position as the people of Argentina, and one of the reasons for beating Hitler would have vanished.

MAN-OF-ALL-WORK WELLES
Undersecretary of State Welles made a great hit in Rio. From the welcoming ovation which broke through police lines as he stepped off his airplane, to the end of the conference, Welles was a popular hero.

The Brazilians, who have a gorge-ous sense of humor even gave him a nickname. It was "Senhor Manoel," which is like calling every Pullman porter "George," and is a name given to the aver-age man-of-all-work around the homes of Rio.

No one ever told the tall and dignified Welles what they were calling him, but carnival songs were even written about him, and those who saw him working night and day for Pan-American Je-fense agreed he was definitely the "Manoel" or man-of-all-work for the Western Hemisphere.

DISTRICT PREPARES TO OBSERVE 'WAR TIME' NEXT WEEK

'Follow The Clock' Is General Theme In Circleville

Many Circleville residents, before they go to bed Sunday night, will turn their clocks ahead an hour thus observing the government's new "war time" schedule.

Work will begin an hour early, the same time according to the clock, for all industries in Circleville. Business men have indicated that they will observe the government's new program, as well as most of the offices.

The clerk of courts office in the Court House will open at 8:30 under the new schedule and will close at 4:30 in the afternoon. The county board of education office will open at 8:30 and close at 5:30. Other offices in the Court House will follow the clock.

All of the county schools, with the exception of Jackson and Muhlenberg, will set their clocks ahead an hour on Sunday night, under the new schedule, most of them changing their opening and dismissing hours.

Jackson and Muhlenberg township school, however, will ignore the time change and the clocks in both schools will remain as they are at the present time, which means that youngsters in whose homes the time change is observed will go to school an hour later, according to their home clocks, than previously.

Effective March 16, however, the schools will adopt the following schedule: Jackson: opens 9:50, noon 1:15 to 2, dismiss 4:45; Muhlenberg: opens at 9, noon, 12 to 1, dismiss 4 p. m.

Schedule for the other county school, which becomes effective Monday morning follows: Darby: opens 9:45, noon 12:45 to 1:45, dismiss 4:45; Deer Creek: opens 9:15, noon 12:15 to 1:15, dismiss 4:15; Duval: opens 9:30, noon 12:30 to 1:30, dismiss 4:30; South Bloomfield: opens 9:30, noon 12:30 to 1:30, dismiss 4:30.

Madison: opens 9, noon 12 to 1, dismiss 4; Monroe: opens 9:50, noon 12:40 to 1:20, dismiss 4:45; Perry: opens 9:30, noon 12:30 to 1, dismiss 4; Pickaway: opens 9:30, noon 1:15 to 1:45, dismiss 4; Salt Creek: opens 9:45, noon 1:20 to 1:45, dismiss 4:30; Scioto: opens 10, noon 1 to 1:45, dismiss 4:45; Walnut: opens 9:05, noon 12 to 12:45, dismiss 3:45; Washington: opens 9:15, noon 12:11 to 12:50, dismiss 4:15; Wayne: opens 8:45, noon 11:45 to 12:45, dismiss 3:45; Ashville opens 9:30, noon 12:30 to 1:30, dismiss 4:30; New Holland: opens 9:30, noon 12:10 to 12:55, dismiss 4:15; Tarrion: opens 9:45, noon 12:45 to 1:45, dismiss 4:45.

POSTMASTER WARNS THAT STAMP CHAINS ILLEGAL

Statement Made
While Japanese bombers still kept raiding the beleaguered island fortress, Gen. Percival declared:

"Just because you do not see so many of our aircraft overhead or so many of our naval units about, it does not mean that they have abandoned Singapore."

"They have gone to places from which they can just as effectively bomb Japanese bases and where our naval strength can be built up. The navy is continuing to do a lot of work around the island and along the shores of Malaya under difficult circumstances."

cussed at the special meeting tonight.

The students walked out of their classes in protest over the 10-day suspension of School Superintendent Willard Weekley on charges of "misconduct." The charges were unexplained both by the board and Weekley, although the latter did say they were "false and unfair," an dthat he intended to fight them.

Morgan and Roberts said that they believed they knew the identity of their attackers, and that they were not the parents of any of the students. The demonstration against the board members was broken up by Sheriff Frank E. Tobison, who with two of his deputies remained on the scene to prevent further disorder.

Weekley has been a center of controversy for some time. Although voted a new four-year contract last spring by a four-to-one vote of the school board, two of the members who voted for him were defeated last fall in a bitter school board campaign. He has headed the school for five years.

Thirty-seven thousand copies of Longfellow's "Evangeline" were sold in the first 10 years after its publication. The poem was translated into 10 languages.

Its stars are Gene Tierney, Tyrone Power, Frances Farmer, George Sanders and Roddy McDowall.

ANTI-HOARDING BLOW IS AIMED BY WASHINGTON

mined, only one person will have to report for an entire family, which includes the mother, father, children and wards. Others living within a household, boarders, relatives etc., will have to register for their own books, except in such cases as invalids.

The office of price administration made it plain that each person registering for war ration book No. 1 will be required to sign a certified statement designating the amount of sugar in his or her family's possession, and the warning was given that any false report would be subject to severe penalties under the U. S. criminal code ranging as high as a $10,000 fine or 10 years in prison.

It was explained that more than two pounds of sugar per person in a family would be considered a hoard, and an "appropriate number" of stamps will be removed from the registrant's book at the time of registration at the public school to account for the "extra" supply.

The amount of sugar per person in the hoard will be divided by the total than can be purchased with each stamp to determine how many must be torn out of the book. In this way, it was believed, it will be "impossible" for the holder of the book to buy any sugar until the hoard is used up.

Fairness Cited

"Justice and fairness to all," Price Administrator Leon Henderson declared, "requires that those who have built up hoards be restrained from buying any more sugar until their stocks have been used up."

He asserted that until the rationing plan goes into effect, "every patriotic citizen should reduce his normal sugar consumption by at least a third," and "those who have hoards should stop buying more sugar and start using up their 'hoards.' He added that "retailers should continue limiting sales to individuals" until the effective date of the plan.

Actual consumption of sugar

this year is expected to be one pound per person per week. However, the estimate for home consumption was reduced to three-quarters of a pound, to allow for the millions who eat in hotels, restaurants and institutions.

In addition, sugar will have to be held out for home canning for the winter and summer months down on the farm and in many a good-smelling kitchen in the nation.

However, in either case — the eaters-out and the home canners — it wasn't known just how much sugar was going to be needed or how it would be rationed. There was speculation that another, but similar plan to the one for other consumers would be worked out.

Albert looked over at the dame behind his bar. He turned to Terboven, whose eyeballs were protruding and staring balefully at the barman by now, and said: "Es geht zu weit. Ja, meine herren, this goes too far. I am obligated to call the manager. I cannot take any responsibility for this, or for your refusal to leave at closing time."

Terboven, not a very tall man and heavy-set, suddenly came from behind that table like a flash. He displayed surprising agility and before Albert could even move a step back, he went down on the polished floor, from Terboven's ham-like fistblow.

The five S. S. drunks rose like one and pummeled the man on the floor while Terboven added hefty kicks with his boot. They took the champagne ice pails and emptied them on Albert, commanding him to get up and bring more champagne. Then they went back to their table, cursing him and telling each other in vociferous language that this was only a sample of what would happen to the Norwegians if any of them as much as let out a peep. They banged on the table and howled for champagne.

Drops of blood marked Albert's painful stagger across the room. He leaned on the bar for support and with an effort telephoned on the house instrument to the manager. ## 'CHUTE THRUST AT SINGAPORE ISLAND LOOMS

Gen. A. E. Percival, who nevertheless promised:
"We will hold Singapore. There's no doubt about that."
Gen. Percival said some of the naval and air force units with their personnel, supplies and equipment had been withdrawn to "other places" but still were carrying on the defense of this besieged far eastern outpost.

Statement Made
While Japanese bombers still kept raiding the beleaguered island fortress, Gen. Percival declared:
"Just because you do not see so many of our aircraft overhead or so many of our naval units about, it does not mean that they have abandoned Singapore."
"They have gone to places from which they can just as effectively bomb Japanese bases and where our naval strength can be built up. The navy is continuing to do a lot of work around the island and along the shores of Malaya under difficult circumstances."

cussed at the special meeting tonight.

The students walked out of their classes in protest over the 10-day suspension of School Superintendent Willard Weekley on charges of "misconduct." The charges were unexplained both by the board and Weekley, although the latter did say they were "false and unfair," an dthat he intended to fight them.

Morgan and Roberts said that they believed they knew the identity of their attackers, and that they were not the parents of any of the students. The demonstration against the board members was broken up by Sheriff Frank E. Tobison, who with two of his deputies remained on the scene to prevent further disorder.

Weekley has been a center of controversy for some time. Although voted a new four-year contract last spring by a four-to-one vote of the school board, two of the members who voted for him were defeated last fall in a bitter school board campaign. He has headed the school for five years.

Thirty-seven thousand copies of Longfellow's "Evangeline" were sold in the first 10 years after its publication. The poem was translated into 10 languages.

Hitler's Norway Viceroy Brutal In Drunken Rage

was used to these carousings and could be relied upon to keep his mouth shut. He was almost a legendary figure to Nazi big-shots, all of whom knew him from the old days when Albert swung a mighty fist against Communists invading his bar to tackle the Nazis in their lair.

But Albert was getting old, prematurely old, a victim of four years in the trenches of World War I and dying by inches from a gassed lung and aching wound in his right leg. Hitler never came to the bar but frequently he'd send for Albert to talk about the trenches and the wounds. It was Albert who arranged and supervised many a Nazi cocktail party or had charge of the drinks to be served at their private dinners. He was, on the whole, a part of the Nazi Party and he knew them like a book.

Detested Terboven
But Albert had his likes and dislikes. He wasn't very keen about the S. S. or troopers from his ranks who came in there to act big and drink beer. He detested Terboven, who always made trouble and never paid or tipped. He was being particularly obnoxious tonight and Albert kept one eye on the clock. At eleven p. m. he would have the right and obligation to close the bar in accordance with strict police regulations.

Terboven called for more champagne and for cigarettes. Albert wearily supplied both, at the same time drawing attention to the fact that in ten minutes he'd have to close up and ask them to leave. They laughed and shouted uproariously, demanding to know who would put them out. Albert reminded them of his soft-spoken ways of the police hour and pointed to the Nazi Party sign on the bar mirror urging its members to set an example by respecting the official closing hour. Somebody, Terboven or one of the S. S., hurled a full bottle of champagne and scored a bulls-eye on the mirror. Glass and sign came crashing down, in addition to a number of bottles on the counter below.

Disavows Responsibility
Albert looked over at the damage behind his bar. He turned to Terboven, whose eyeballs were protruding and staring balefully at the barman by now, and said: "Es geht zu weit. Ja, meine Herren, this goes too far. I am obligated to call the manager. I cannot take any responsibility for this, or for your refusal to leave at closing time."

Terboven, not a very tall man and heavy-set, suddenly came from behind that table like a flash. He displayed surprising agility and before Albert could even move a step back, he went down on the polished floor, from Terboven's ham-like fistblow. The five S. S. drunks rose like one and pummeled the man on the floor while Terboven added hefty kicks with his boot. They took the champagne ice pails and emptied them on Albert, commanding him to get up and bring more champagne. Then they went back to their table, cursing him and telling each other in vociferous language that this was only a sample of what would happen to the Norwegians if any of them as much as let out a peep. They banged on the table and howled for champagne.

Beat Barman Mercilessly
Drops of blood marked Albert's painful stagger across the room. He leaned on the bar for support and with an effort telephoned on the house instrument to the manager. He never finished, for Terboven and the five others were on him like men gone berserk. They dragged him from behind that bar and struck him resounding blows.

ANTI-HOARDING BLOW IS AIMED BY WASHINGTON

mined, only one person will have to report for an entire family, which includes the mother, father, children and wards. Others living within a household, boarders, relatives etc., will have to register for their own books, except in such cases as invalids.

The office of price administration made it plain that each person registering for war ration book No. 1 will be required to sign a certified statement designating the amount of sugar in his or her family's possession, and the warning was given that any false report would be subject to severe penalties under the U. S. criminal code ranging as high as a $10,000 fine or 10 years in prison.

It was explained that more than two pounds of sugar per person in a family would be considered a hoard, and an "appropriate number" of stamps will be removed from the registrant's book at the time of registration at the public school to account for the "extra" supply.

The amount of sugar per person in the hoard will be divided by the total that can be purchased with each stamp to determine how many must be torn out of the book. In this way, it was believed, it will be "impossible" for the holder of the book to buy any sugar until the hoard is used up.

Fairness Cited
"Justice and fairness to all," Price Administrator Leon Henderson declared, "requires that those who have built up hoards be restrained from buying any more sugar until their stocks have been used up."

He asserted that until the rationing plan goes into effect, "every patriotic citizen should reduce his normal sugar consumption by at least a third," and "those who have hoards should stop buying more sugar and start using up their 'hoards.'" He added that "retailers should continue limiting sales to individuals" until the effective date of the plan.
